

Any ruling that limits the ability of nonprofit associations to communicate with their members is detrimental to the continuing education of professionals throughout the nation. Associations must be able to send notices of upcoming educational events and member services via fax and other electronic media. By including nonprofits in the limitation on unsolicited fax transmissions, the Commission is unnecessarily harming an important sector of the economy.